

Utility Consultant Supports Business Water Savings

CUB UK Ltd are delighted to announce the launch of their Commercial Water Broker service. As legislation for the non-domestic market changes in England, business customers will be able to choose their supplier, with the prospect of making significant savings.

England's non-domestic water marketplace opens on 1st April 2017 when all water companies will have to apply for retail licences in order to manage customer accounts. Therefore all business customers regardless of consumption will have the power to choose their supplier of water and wastewater.

Offering a new level of choice and improved service levels, the open market should prove to be a positive change though there could be a period of disruption as the restructure of water companies gets underway.

The Scottish water market opened in 2008 and they have experienced many benefits including reduced water prices and a rise in customer satisfaction. English customers can expect similar benefits and will have the opportunity to consolidate services across multiple sites regardless of location.

CUB will offer existing and new customers the opportunity of their experience of the utility market to ensure they make the most of this transition. Offering impartial advice, free consultations and tailored solutions, they welcome businesses to take advantage of the hassle-free option of professional utility broker services.
