"East Anglia's Children's Hospices offer a holistic and family-centred approach to care ensuring that children, young people and their family's needs are met, whether physical, emotional, social or spiritual.

Care can be delivered in the family home, at hospital, in the community, at one of our three hospices, or a combination of all three, depending on the family's and child's preference.

All care staff are trained and qualified, and include: registered children's nurses, learning disabilities nurses (with experience of working with children), clinical nurse specialists, a medical director, specialist pharmacist, care assistants, play specialists, music therapists, art therapists, physiotherapists, occupational therapists and counsellors. Medical services at home continue to be provided by the family's GP and at the hospice by the local GP service.

The care team liaise with other professionals involved in supporting each child, such as medical consultants, community physiotherapists and schools." (Source: East Anglia Children's Hospice)
